Abstract: Hindi language is comparatively simple for listening, speaking and writing. In India a number of persons use the National language very easily including those from southern state of India also. The beginners and some foreigners have some difficulties about the numbering system in our language. However, that system is very easy for the experienced persons in Hindi or those were born and brought up in Hindi using state. Here discussing a chance to include one parallel numbering system for Hindi language, it will help to improve the interest of beginners for studying the language more systematic way.

1. Introduction

Hindi is the most commonly spoken language in India. It is the fifth most spoken language in the world with about 182 million native speakers in 1998. The script used in writing Hindi is Devanagari. The Devanagari script, like the majority of the script of South and South - East Asia, is derived from ancient Brahmi script. The Brahmi developed into a number of regional varieties, partly in response to differing technologies of writing; the Proto-Nagari style originated in Rajasthan, India towards the end of the Sixth century C.E. (Dani, 1963; Sharma, 2002). By the eleventh century Devanagari had become important for transcription of Sanskrit Literature (Singh, 1991). Today Devanagari is used for writing Hindi as well as Marathi, Nepali and at least twenty-four other languages (Unicode Consortium, 2006). The dialects of Hindi are more accurately described as regional languages of the "Hindi zone" or "belt," an area that approximates the region of northern India, south through the state of Madhya Pradesh. Within this region, the degree to which local languages are similar to standard Hindi varies significantly. Maithili—the easternmost local language of the Hindi belt—bears other historical similarity to Bengali than to typical Hindi. Similarly, Rajasthani, the westernmost language of the belt, in a few respects resembles Gujarati more than typical Hindi. Hindi is commonly written, spoken and understood in north India and the majority other places in India. In 1997, a survey found that 66% of Indians can speak Hindi. The most identifiable form of Hindi is known as Hindustani.

Hindustani is the local language of people living in Delhi, Haryana, Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, Jharkand, Madhyapradesh and parts of Rajasthan (Brown 2005).

The Hindu-Arabic number system or Hindu number system is a positional decimal number system, currently the most general representative symbol of numbers in the world. It was developed between the 1st and 4th centuries by Indian mathematicians. Indian mathematics emerged in the Indian subcontinent from 1200 BC until the end of the 18th century. In the classical period of Indian mathematics (400 AD to 1600 AD), important contributions were made by scholars like Aryabhata, Brahmagupta, Mahavira (Mathematician), Bhaskara, II, Madhava of Sangamagrama and Nilakantha Somayaji. The decimal number system in use today was first recorded in Indian mathematics (Ifrah, 2000). The conventional numbering system from one to Hundred are different from each other, however, from hundred onwards is comparatively connected each other in Hindi language. In conventional system it is difficult for the beginners to study from one to hundred only. Here discussing a chance to introduce a parallel numbering system may help to overcome the difficulties of beginners and foreigners to study Hindi numbers very easily.

2. Materials and Methods

For the finalization of this numbering system, the different numbering system were collected, compared and studied. From the southern state, numbering system of Malayalam, Tamil, Kannada and Telungue were used. For this study numbering system in English was used as a foreign language.

3. Results and Discussion

Based on the observation of the different languages used for the proposed study, a new numbering system is developed. In the above said all languages except Hindi have a uniform pattern for numbering system, that means the difference in the system up to twenty, then twenty onwards the numbering system are very easy to study. From twenty onwards the numbering system is mostly related with the main number. For example after twenty the numbers starts with the help of twenty; twenty one, twenty two etc. Here twenty and one is used for the formation of twenty one similarly twenty and two is used for the formation of twenty two. A new and simple numbering system is developed for Hindi language based on different numbering system was followed in different language. The Table 1 shows that different numbering system and the modified numbering system for Hindi language. In addition to this new simple number system may develop for Hindi language that means number connecting system.

The different reports were available mainly focused on the linguistic studies and its relationship to the societies. The study of bidirectionality between language and social structure has always been the concern of sociolinguistics. Irrespective of the community or communities being discussed monolingual or bilingual or multilingual – the emphasis has always been on the manner in which language influences and is influenced by socio-cultural factors (Ashok Kumar, 2004).

The choice of one linguistic forms as against the other depends on extra – linguistic factors such as participant relationship, topic of discourse and the socio-cultural setting. Any shift or modification of these variables results in a subsequent shift of linguistic form. For instances, is bi/multilingual societies like India, individuals are seen to alternate between relevant local language and English to establish different levels of interpersonal relationships or to interact on a specific topic in different settings. In addition, the definite roles assigned to a language or languages also determine which of these language varieties or language will be used. A function-centered use of linguistic form in what is called Diglossia, a model introduced by Ferguson (1959), latter extended by Fishman (1971) and further broadened by Fasold (1984) to give a more comprehensive observation of diglossic relationships. Following Fishman's domain concept, many studies have attempted to investigate the significance of institutionalized contents for language choice (Greenfield, 1972, Kachru, 1982).

The present study was an attempt to generate a new parallel and simple number system in Hindi Language. This may help to use Hindi numbers handle very easy and in simple way.

4. Conclusion

The conventional numbering system from one to Hundred are different from each other, however, from hundred onwards is comparatively connected each other in Hindi language. In conventional system it is difficult for the beginners to study from one to hundred only. This new numbering system may help to form the numbering system from hundred onward also. For this purpose follow the connecting pattern of English or other South Indian language. The conventional numbering system will be completely protected and the new proposed numbering system may be considered as a parallel system. So this may help to improve the communication skill of the people from outside Hindi speaking state and may generate interest to study Hindi language.

Acknowledgement

I thankful to Dr. K.S. Beena, Assistant Professor, Department of Hindi, Mahatma Gandhi College, Thiruvananthapuram, Kerala, India, for his encouragement and sharing the numbering system in Hindi language for this study. Thankful to Dr. Praveen Kumar, B.R., Assistant Professor, Department of Botany, Mahatma Gandhi College, Thiruvananthapuram Kerala, India, for his encouragement for this study .
